Why there will be war: Syria and the geopolitics of American militarism

23 September 2013

The agreement reached between the United States and Russia on the elimination of Syria's chemical weapons arsenal has postponed, but not cancelled, US war plans. The Obama administration has done no more than execute a tactical retreat. It remains committed to regime change in Syria, which US imperialism sees as an essential part of its preparations for a confrontation with Iran.

These meetings will review the historical and political issues behind the US war drive against Syria and in the broader Middle East.
